

Montco Court's Dicta on Protection for Children Is 'Disturbing'

The article, "Child in U.S. Illegally Doesn't Qualify as Dependent," published Feb. 23 in Legal sibling publication Pennsylvania Law Weekly, summarized a county dependency case, but overstates the court's holding and characterizes the court's dicta as legal reasoning.

| March 15, 2016 at 12:00 AM

The article, "Child in U.S. Illegally Doesn't Qualify as Dependent," published Feb. 23 in Legal sibling publication Pennsylvania Law Weekly, summarized a county dependency case, but overstates the court's holding and characterizes the court's dicta as legal reasoning. As organizations that represent abused, abandoned and neglected children, we are concerned that the article's overstatements may perpetuate misunderstandings in the decision that will put children seeking a court's protection at risk in the future.